Let's Start!

Medicine has come a long way!

Learning Outcome

Describe routines and regular activities in a wider range of social and work contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do people in your country still use traditional medical treatments or home remedies?
- What sort of home remedies do you know?
- Do you use them? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about staying healthy.
- I can talk about people's past habits.
- I can discuss experiences I've had or haven't had.

Let's Explore!

You have had enough*!

* When "you have had enough", you will not tolerate any more of the current situation.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

You just got home after a tense day at work with a headache. Your head has pounded for hours. You have had enough! You take two pills and soon feel better. Treating headaches used to be much different. In the Stone Age, shamans used to help those with frequent headaches. They would carefully bore a hole into the patient's skull. Shocking? Well, many patients actually survived the treatment! In ancient Egypt, headaches used to be treated with oil. A healer would cook a catfish skull in the oil then he would rub it on the patient's head. In 17th century England, physicians used to ease headaches with feverfew. Recent studies have shown that this herb does in fact ease migraines. Pain hasn't changed. How we treat the pain and other illness has. Traditional treatments once considered home remedies have become part of modern homeopathic medicine. Headache tablets became commonplace. You probably have some in your medicine cabinet.

Learning Points

The Present Perfect Tense vs. The Simple Past Tense

You use the Present Perfect tense to talk about a finished action or event that is connected to the present in some way.

You use the Simple Past tense to talk about a finished action or event not connected to the present.

When you use the Present Perfect there is a connection between what happened in the past and now. You use time markers like for, since and ever with the Present Perfect.

When you use the Past Simple, the time is always past. You use time markers with the past like: then, ago, yesterday, when I was ... with the Simple Past.

We use have/has + the past participle of the verb in Present Perfect sentences.

Look at the chart about how to form the Present Perfect tense:

Verb	Past tense form	Past participle form	Example
pound	pounded	pounded	Your head has pounded ... become	became	become	Home remedies have become ... have	had	had	You have had ...
show	showed	shown	Recent studies have shown ...

Examples:

- Recent studies have shown that this herb does in fact ease migraines.
- You have had enough!

Learning Points

Used to and Would to Talk About Past Habits

Used to and would are both used to talk about past actions.

We use used to to express something that we often did in the past, but don't do anymore. It is often used to talk about something that was a habit, or a way of life in the past. We use it to contrast past habits with present situations.

Used to can refer to situations as well as habitual actions.

We use would to refer to past actions and habits as well.

Would only refers to actions, but not situations.

Examples:

- Shamans used to help those with frequent headaches.
- They would carefully bore a hole into the patient's skull.
